The Heiresses of New York.

[New York correspondence of the Buffalo Commer cial Advertiser.] Probably no city in the United States has so many beautiful, and what club men call "eligible," helresses as New York, and as I have written of the rich widows and bachelors, some facts and particulars concerning the maidens, rich and fancy free, may be as readable and interesting. It is not inappropriate to head the list with Miss Marcia Roosevelt, although she is an orphan, her father, ex-Judge Roosevelt, having died two rears ago, and her mother last winter in The interdict of the Government produced Paris. The Roosevelts came of good Knickerbocker stock, and were for many years conspicuous among the elile. Mrs. Roosevelt was a Miss Van Ness, and her father was Minister to Spain. She was a beautiful and talented lady in her younger days, and a great entertainer at the old Roosevelt mansion of Broadway, near Thir-teenth street. At her death she left her property, valued at $2,000,000, to Miss Marcis, her only daughter, and, it is said, to the exclusion of her sons. The young lady inherits many of her distinguished mother's talents, and is almost as general a favorite.

Miss Stevens, daughter of the late Colonel Paran Stevens, of hotel fame, is heiress to a million odd, and reported engaged to an but all the stronger for their spasmodic cha-English nobleman. She is young, pretty, and stylish, fond of society, horse-racing, her winters in Europe and her summers at tains of this bounds the prairies and moun-Newport, where the Stevens cottage is opposite the Ocean House. Mrs. Stevens was a Miss Reed, of Boston, and her sister, who is completing her musical education in Paris, is engaged to Mr. Moses H. Grinnell, formerly collector of the port.

Miss Weed, daughter of Thurlow Weed, will one day come in possession of many hundred thousands. She is a very clever and accomplished young lady, and acts as her father's secretary. They live plainly, but handsomely and comfortably, in a large double house on Twelfth street just west of Miss Andrews, daughter of the late Loring Andrews, the millionaire, is destined to be one of the richest ladies in America. her father's estate being $5,000,000. She is now in Europe with her mother, and their magnificent country-seat at Newport has been rented to Mr. Havermeyer, the Austrian Consul-General at New York. Miss Andrews is not yet nineteen years of age, and very beautiful.

Miss Josephine Hoey is the daughter of John Hoey, head of Adams Express Company, whose wife was once leading lady at Wallack's Theatre. The young lady is possibly two and twenty years of age, stylish, and the best "whip" at Long Branch, where the Hoeys have their summer residence. She drives a pair of cream-colored horses to a basket-carriage, and is known to all the habitues of the Branch. John Hoey began life at the lowest round of the ladder, and is now worth "all the way up" from $750,000. Josephine is the only daughter. Miss Moller is a daughter of William

Moller, the sugar refiner, whom everybody thought rich until he failed about a year ago. She is very stylish and effective, and has been much admired in Paris and Vienna. The gossips say her father settled half a million on her years ago, and she has always been regarded as an heiress by young men in search of a rich wife. Miss Lamont, daughter of the late Charles

Lamont, who fell from the window of his house, on Fifth avenue, one summer's night while the family was at West Point, or Providence. and was instantly killed, is with her mother fall. Her dot will be fully $250,000. Miss Astor and Miss Chandler, niece and granddaughter of the late W. B. Astor, are both heiresses to large fortunes. So is Miss Kernochan, daughter of Mr. J.

P. Kernochan, who lately paid $112,000 cash for the celebrated Barreda Mansion on Madison avenue. Miss Smith, niece of Mrs. A. T. Stewart, has a large estate settled upon her since the merchant prince's death, and is now in Paris with Mrs. Stewart. Miss Barlow, daughter of S. L. M. Barlow, the Erie lawyer; Miss Cooper, granddaughter of Peter Cooper; Miss Brown, daughter of James Brown, of Brown Brothers; Miss Lee, daughter of William H. Lee, and Miss Morgan, daughter of ex-Governor Morgan, are all heiresses, and there are others whose names at this writing

The Old Soldier.

He was quite an old man, and he had quite a bad limp, and he remarked as he touched "All I want is money enough to get to Savannah. I feel that I have not long to live, and I want to be buried in that nice, cool graveyard just outside of Savannah." The appeal didn't open a single wallet. He was talking to three men who had found a shady spot under a grocery awning, and he seemed a little disappointed. Pulling a new string, he remarked: "Gentlemen, won't you do something for an old soldier?"

"Were you a soldier in the last war?"

asked one of the group. "I was," was the prompt reply. "What branch of the service?"

"The heavy artillery."

"Where were you stationed?"

were sometimes here and sometimes there. The fact was, our artillery was so heavy that federate Government didn't seem to expect low and the rocks shine out welcome in we generally kept it on a hill. The Conthat us three or four men were going to drag a big cannon all over the country and whip the Yankees to boot. Yes, I was wounded in the left leg." "In what action?" was asked.

"I never knew what they named it; my business was to git up and hump and knock thunder out of a whole Union regiment to once, and you just bet I didn't have any time to fool around and ask what they were going to name the battle. I went into the war to fight, and didn't I just throw myself, though!"

"Did you throw yourself under a wagon?" quietly asked one of the three. "Sometimes I did, and sometimes I didn't. They used to let me fight any way to win. I've fit from under a wagon and from the top of a tree, and the boys used to call me the wild cat."

"They must have seen you 'clawing' to the rear," suggested another of the trio. "Very likely, gentlemen. Sometimes could fight better at the rear, and I went back. Then I'd change and fight on the flank, and then I'd advance and mow 'em BOOK-BINDING. down in front."

"Where did you say you were woundgasped the man, starting back. "We do!" they replied in chorus. He closely scanned each face, and was in dulging in gestures to show how he deplored such conduct toward one who had fought bravely, when one of the men said:

"Come, now, speak the truth, and we'll raise you thirty cents." The old man turned to go, halted, hesitated, and then replied: "I suppose, gentlemen, that I fell off a building in Atlanta and hurt my leg, but it happened so durned close after a battle that I could never really tell whether the fall or the fight burt me the most. Now, please pass in your ten centses!"—Raleigh Sentinel.

A Y.

Judge Davis, it is said, has been very much cut up, or rather cut down, by the unanimity with which his presidential aspirations were overlooked at St. Louis. He has dwindled away to a very ghost of himself, has had three reefs taken in his vest, and when he puts on a linea duster and walks down the street he is so shrunken that his friends, looking after him, ask, What are those fellows doing under there?"-Hawkeye.

It looks very much as if the wild valleys and rocky fastnesses about the Black Hills are to be suddenly transformed into populous commonwealths, like California and Nevada. The same causes which peopled the sandy shores of the Pacific and the desert hills far into Nevada exist in the wilds of Dacotah, even to the verge of Montana. The pilgrimages have been steady since the first glowing accounts of the treasure-land came to the expectant ears of the adventurous and discontented in the East. The proportions of the stampede can hardly be realized from the meagre reports which reecho faintly the intrepid endurance and adventurous devotion of the treasure-seekers. By colonies of from fifty to three times that number the miners have been pouring in amain during the last fifteen months. apparently not the slightest perceptible effect. Indeed, on the contrary, it seems to have added zest to the spirit which sets masses fortune-seeking. The incorrigible spirit of unrest; the quenchiess thirst for suddenly-acquired riches which takes hold of men's imaginations at certain stages of life; the longing for change and all that is implied by untried conditions and circumstances; the irrepressible impulse of ro mance, which gives color to the most practical mind by turns; the eagerness for the unknown-all these motives bind men together for just such missions as the settling of the treasure lands requires. Without these impulses, the shortest-lived it is true, racter, such hegiras would be impossible. It is the instinct of adventure more than tains of this boundless continent, just as the love of discovery, rather than the zeal for gain, brings about the prodigious results of science.

In the settlement of the Black Hills country there is an element of mystery the like of which the history of the California pioneers make no mention. When the pactolian streams had become known of men in '48 and '49, the steamers from Panama were crowded: the overland route an incessant carayan of eager emigrants. It is markedly not so now. Indeed, on the contrary, something like premeditation is apparent in the suppression of the numbers pouring Black Hillward. Only an occasional glimpse of surprise and slaughter, or captured household treasures, bring to the mind of the eastern world the remotest suggestion that the nucleus of a new civilization, the molecules of a new organism, are gradually drawing together among the streams which water the golden sands of Dacotah. Stray glimpses from the extreme frontier presses now and then give an idea of the manner of men these new Argonauts are. They are made up mainly of the brain and muscle who find the hard lives of New England farm life inexpressibly dull and unpaying in every sense. Who cannot see them, as they throw down the old implements of husbandry, the old-fashioned peaked plough, the hoe, rake, alone available on the sterile hills of New Hampshire and Vermont; the whole primitive system, indeed, by which the south was despoiled of its life-giving treasures before steam-ploughs and patent reapers lessened man's labor, and without very materially increasing his pleasure or profit. The shops, too, contribute a following; but the city is rarely a recruiting ground for enterprises of industry or endurance. It is only when the study yeomen have gone on in advance and established the civilized conditions requiring a certain grade of efficiency that the city malcontents will consent to leave the paths, which are no paths of pleasantness, nor the ways, which are neither the ways of peace, plenty,

New countries are always settled by men at the West End, Long Branch. She is just who have an instinct of the needs of new of age, very handsome and fascinating. It is reported that she is to be married in the were of varied conditions and regularly diversified parts. Then whatever the industrial and commercial conditions of the time may have been, the thirst for gold parched other heads than those of the horney-handed. It was fortunate, too, that it so happened. We should have been shorn of some of the most picturesque episodes in our natural history, and deprived of some of the most epic contributions in our incipient literature.

It was the outrush of "'49" that gave form to the matchless idyls of Bret Harte and the most humorous masterpieces of Mark Twain. It was among the untamed toilers with Sierra gulches that Harte drew the inspiration for the series of stories which shall in future stand not far from Dickens's works in the morals and entertainment of the reading millions.

Is there a Bret Harte among the new goldhunters? Is there a man with an eye so keen and an imagination so tensile as the brilliant romancer of the Sierras? Shall we have presently sketches of life and character from the wild mining towns-glimpses of passionate, rugged nature, so exaggerated in expression, so altogether natural and unnatural, so real and unreal, that the mind is captivated by the apparent contradictions? May it be that we shall presently discover a genius so bold, a hand so deft in portrayal, and a mind so instructed with the best forms of literary expression, as the author of the Sierra idyls.

It would be worth the trouble and turmoil of settling a new country; it would be worth adventuring all the sea of trouble which the destruction of flood and field imply; it would be worth adventuring the horror of Indian war, in a modified way, to bring about such a net result as Bret Harte "Well," slowly replied the stranger, as if and the anti-Raphaelite school, which owns he hadn't expected such a question, "we him as its master. While the nation at large is attracted otherwheres discussing the Indian possibilities, this new empire is growing by accretion where the stream runs yel-rugged lines of flint and gold. Presently we shall hear of cities and towns, incipient political ambitions, and a new State, where Sitting Bull now guards with his tawny braves the no longer impenetrable treasure lands of the Dacotahs .-Chicago Times.

Our readers will thank us for the fol lowing sure preventive against hydrophobia in dogs: Boil three tablespoonfuls of salt and an ounce of carbolic powder in a pint of water, squeeze in a lemon, and then let a piece of meat simmer in the mixture to give it attractive taste. Take out the meat and put the liquor in a cool place. Then, while the remedy is cooling, lead the dog out behind the barn and shoot him between the eyes with a Remington rifle. One pint of the liquor will be found enough for a hundred dogs.-Rome
